About the Author

Veechi Curtis is passionate about Australian business and the potential that people have to realise their dreams, achieve financial independence and contribute to the society around them.

Born in Scotland, Veechi attended university in Bathurst, NSW, where she completed her degree in Accountancy and Business Management. She has been a business consultant specialising in accounting software for more than 15 years, training all kinds of businesses in how to make QuickBooks software work for them. As a journalist, she has written for many publications including Australian PC World, Australian Personal Computer, Australian Reseller News, CCH Australia Limited, and has also been a columnist for The Sydney Morning Herald.

Behind the scenes, Veechi's business consulting practice provides valuable insights into how best to configure accounting software and generate meaningful reports. Veechi is also author of the Australian edition of Small Business For Dummies, as well as co-author of the Australian edition of Business Plans For Dummies.

Veechi has three children and lives with her husband in the beautiful Blue Mountains of NSW.

Author's Acknowledgements

Thanks and much love to my husband John, and to my children Daniel, Isla and Finbar. Love to Mum and Dad, and to my extended family all around the globe.

I'd also like to say thanks to the team at Wiley Publishing Australia for their valuable support and editorial guidance. Also thanks to everyone at Reckon Software, particularly Gerald Chait, Dean Darke, Kevin McDermott and Samantha Stone. Last, but not least, thanks to Nathan Elcoate for his excellent leave-no-stone-untuned technical review.
